ABOUT THE JOURNAL

Latin American Human Rights Studies (LAHRS) is an open-access, online annual journal published by the PhD Program in Human Rights at the Federal University of Goiás (UFG), Brazil. Founded in 2021, the journal promotes high-quality interdisciplinary research on human rights through a rigorous double-blind peer-review process and follows international standards for academic publishing.

ABOUT THE PUBLISHER

UFG is a federal public university in Brazil, founded in 1960. It has more than 20,000 undergraduate students, more than 4,200 graduate students, and more than 3,000 permanent faculty members. The journal is edited by the PhD Program in Human Rights, which offers MA and PhD degrees and hosts postdoctoral researchers. Founded in 2012, the Program has more than 35 permanent faculty members and more than 250 graduate students.

ABOUT THE EDITOR-IN-CHIEF

Heitor Pagliaro is a professor of law at UFG and a former director of the PhD Program in Human Rights at UFG. He has been a visiting scholar in the Department of Government at the University of Texas at Austin (USA, 2024) and in the Department of Law, Politics, and Development at the Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna (Pisa, Italy, 2024). Professor Pagliaro holds a PhD in Law from the University of Brasília (Brazil), an MA in Philosophy from UFG, and a BA in Law from UFG. His research focuses on philosophy of law, political theory, and human rights theory.

ABOUT VOLUME 6 (2026)

Human rights are increasingly shaped by structured forms of control that operate through law, technology, institutions, and public policy. This volume examines how mechanisms of regulation, surveillance, administration, and normalization organize bodies, identities, territories, labor relations, digital environments, and forms of collective life. Rather than reducing control to direct coercion, it highlights the more complex ways in which power is exercised, justified, resisted, and reconfigured. In doing so, the volume approaches human rights not only as claims to protection and emancipation, but also as a field defined by the institutional and technological arrangements that condition their possibility.

ABOUT VOLUME 6 EDITORS

This volume was edited by Júlio César Suzuki, Rita de Cássia Marques Lima de Castro, and Heitor Pagliaro. Professor Suzuki is a full professor in the Department of Geography at the University of São Paulo (USP), Brazil, and Deputy Director of the PhD Program in Latin American Integration at USP. He was formerly a postdoctoral researcher at Université Paris 1 Panthéon-Sorbonne, Université Rennes 2, and Université de Pau et des Pays de l'Adour. He holds a PhD in Geography from USP, a BA in Geography, a BA in Languages, and a BA in Chemistry. Professor Rita de Cássia Marques Lima de Castro is a professor in the PhD Program in Latin American Integration at USP. She holds a PhD from the same program, an MA in Business Management, a BA in Journalism, and a BA in Accounting. She was a postdoctoral researcher in Economics at USP in 2015 and 2019. Professor Pagliaro has served as Director of the PhD Program in Human Rights at UFG, as Vice President of the Human Rights Commission of the Goiás Chapter of the Brazilian Bar Association, and as a member of the Human Rights Council of the State of Goiás. He has been a visiting scholar at the University of Texas (USA) and at the Scuola Superiore Sant'Anna (Italy). Together, the volume editors bring complementary expertise across geography, Latin American integration, legal scholarship, and human rights, further strengthening LAHRS as a space for interdisciplinary scholarly production.
